COMMENTS FROM THE CEO

Q1 2017 was Hoylu's first operational quarter since the company was established. Following a private placement of SEK 25 million in January, Hoylu's priority in the quarter was to put together strategic building blocks, recruit a world-class team to pursue a software and solutions' strategy and position our company for robust growth in a strong underlying market of digital transformation within the enterprises.

Through the acquisition of We-inspire we got a unique suite of software for ideation and collaboration that already has been tested and validated in smaller scale by some of the worlds largest companies within automotive, construction and pharmaceuticals. The immediate value we bring to customers is the ability to collaborate on ultra large surfaces and to include existing applications in their workflow for planning, design or brainstorming. Since we want to get closer to these customers whilst maintaining our relationship with resellers we also acquired Huddlewall™ from Scalable Display (described in more detail below under "Events After The End of The First Period"). Huddlewall is a packaged solution that enables us to shorten lead times and simplify installation. Included in the deal was an experienced sales team based in Boston that will help us grow faster.

The third major building block was the acquisition of Creative Minds Consulting and the recruitment of a senior product- and software development team in Seattle. The acquisition and recruitments were a result of personal connections and long time discussions about a shared vision to develop the next generation of immersive collaboration and smart building solutions.

By engaging directly with large global companies within market verticals like construction, real estate, automotive, pharmaceuticals, hospitality and lifestyle we realize there is a large untapped potential in helping these companies become more productive by offering easy to use tools and integrated solutions for their innovation workflow and creative collaboration processes. Most companies today have access to audio- and videoconferencing solutions that cover basic needs for communication between individuals or groups of people. Most companies also have good systems to manage structured data like financial or customer data. However, innovation processes and the ability to capture and manage unstructured data are increasingly becoming key to competitive advantage.

Hoylu today offers solutions for ideation and brainstorming where small or large teams can work on ultra large projector walls and large displays whilst extending the experience to personal devices and combining with existing applications and workflow. We see further potential in automation and ease of use by adding connectivity and personalized intuitive interaction with screens and surfaces in the meeting room or in the office building. People and teams should be able to collaborate, share ideas and content as if they were in the same room, even if they are in different rooms, buildings and locations. Our software team has a strong track record of building automated solutions including Internet of Things components, and our first initiative in this area will be together with a large customer in the cruise line and lifestyle industry.

In the first quarter, we also made a small investment in VR Global. VR Global has a unique software platform for creating and presenting interactive 360-degree content on multiple devices including augmented and virtual reality hardware. We are offering this solution to our customers as an extended experience to our solutions for presentation. In the future, we can see AR, VR and mixed reality become an integral part of collaboration and multi-site conferencing.

FUTURE OUTLOOK

With the acquisition of We-inspire, Creative minds consulting and Huddlewall™, and the investment in VR Global, we have the building blocks in place to pursue our strategy. We expect strong growth in the coming quarters both from sales of the Hoylu Software Suite, Hoylu Huddlewall™ and from project revenues (Non Refundable Engineering) and the development of Smart Office solutions.

EVENTS AFTER THE END OF THE PERIOD

- Hoylu announced a 5-year master services agreement with a large US based company in the cruise line and lifestyle industry for the development of immersive Smart Office and Smart Spaces solutions, in April. Hoylu estimates the agreement's potential order value to more than USD 2 million over the five-year period. The first delivery is scheduled for the second and third quarter of 2017.
- Hoylu announced the acquisition of Huddlewall™ business unit from Scalable Display Technologies including a sales team of four people in Boston, US, customer base, intellectual property and trademarks, current book of business and prospects, in April.
- Hoylu announced SEK 2.2 million orders from Suffolk, one of the largest construction companies in the US, in April. These orders are scheduled to be delivered in the second quarter of 2017.
- Hoylu announced an exclusive master distributor agreement with Polymedia in Russia and CIS subject to sales performance of minimum SEK 13 million over three years, in May.
